

Engineer Research and Development Center (ERDC) Application for an Evaluation License

ERDC has the authority to grant licenses pursuant to 35 USC §§207-209. ERDC follows the regulations set forth in 37 CFR §404. All ERDC licenses are individually negotiated and each license contains terms concerning technology transfer (practical application), license duration, royalties, and periodic reporting—information that constitutes the business terms of the license.

The evaluation license application process requires the licensee to provide an application. Once the license application has been accepted by ERDC and the potential licensee, all information in the finalized application will be included in the evaluation license agreement. Please note that no revenues, sales or transfers of any products or services embodying the ERDC technology can be generated under any ensuing evaluation license agreement with the exception of samples. In the interests of establishing a market, for any sampling to occur, the licensee is required to obtain prior written authorization from ERDC and must also execute a ERDC Material Transfer Agreement (to be provided upon request) before proceeding with any transfer of samples or materials to a third party.

All information submitted in this license application will be maintained in confidence by ERDC and will not be subject to disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act.

4. Proposed License Terms

Grant of License:	USACE, Engineer Research and Development Center (ERDC) would grant to Company, a revocable, royalty-bearing, evaluation license to Technology.
Type of License:	Non-Exclusive
Fields of Use:	All fields of use
Sublicense Rights:	Not Granted
Term of Use:	One (1) year from license agreement execution
License Fees:	Company would pay to ERDC an upfront, nonrefundable license fee of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500.00), payable upon signing of license.
Royalty Obligations:	Royalty obligations are covered under license fee. The purpose of an evaluation license agreement is to allow the Company to practice the Technology in order to establish practicability, customers, market(s), supply chain(s), sales avenue(s), etc. No revenues, sales or transfers of any products or services embodying the ERDC technology can be generated under any ensuing evaluation license agreement with the exception of samples. In the interests of establishing a market, for any sampling to occur, the licensee is required to obtain prior written authorization from ERDC and must also execute a ERDC Material Transfer Agreement (to be provided upon request) before proceeding with any transfer of samples or materials to a third party.
Reporting Period:	Within one month after the end of the evaluation license period, Company is required to provide ERDC a final report documenting the results of the evaluation. The report must include Company's intent with respect to commercializing technology. If Company decides to continue commercialization efforts, Company must first apply and be granted a commercial license agreement before additional/continued commercialization activities can commence.

Company understands that the above is the initial basis for an offer to license the Technology.
